Brent F. Goodfellow Attains National Certification

(Hillsboro, Oregon) – Brent F. Goodfellow, Managing Partner of OneTech, LLC, the technology affiliate of Portland area accounting and consulting firm BKR Fordham Goodfellow, LLP has qualified for the Certified Information Technology Professional (CITP) credential.

A Certified Information Technology Professional (CITP) is a CPA credentialed as a technology professional and recognized for his or her unique ability to bridge the gaps between business and technology. This is a unique credential, unlike other certifications that recognize only a narrow scope of skills. Bestowed by the American Institute of Certified Public Accountants, the nation's governing body of CPAs throughout the country, the CITP credential encourages and recognizes excellence in the providing of technology-related services by the profession. The AICPA provides the tools, training, and support for CPAs to become technologically adept and to benefit the business and academic communities they serve.

Goodfellow, who is a CPA and also a Microsoft Certified Systems Engineer, Trainer and Business Solutions Professional, started working in the technology field after getting frustrated with the technology providers he saw working with his clients. As a partner with BKR Fordham Goodfellow, he “found technology providers were not taking a business approach to technology needs. They were implementing technology for technology’s sake and not looking at how technology could solve business issues or increase a company’s bottom line. As a CPA, I was frustrated with the lack of measurable return on investment.”

One Tech provides BKR Fordham Goodfellow clients and other organizations in the Portland area with a full range of technology services, including technology assessment planning, hardware and software procurement, network services, telephony, HIPAA compliance, and maintenance and support.

BKR Fordham Goodfellow provides assurance, accounting and tax services, and management consulting to individuals and businesses throughout the Portland area. As a member of BKR International, an association of leading independent CPA firms, BKR Fordham Goodfellow and One Tech have the added resources of more than 120 CPA firms in more than 300 cities worldwide.
